SOURCE:

When dredging operations planned in Wismar harbor in 1954 were cancelled by the government without explanation, inquiries were initiated to determine the volume of dredging capacity thus made available. Source learned that the 750 workers previously employed on these dredging operations were scheduled to be employed on dredging operations in the Oder River stretch, for which the Peles were responsible, and that Walter Keul, of the State Secretariat, Shipping, would go to Warsaw to discuss this subject.
